The spinoff will feature an all-new cast of characters yet retain the real-time, pulse-pounding, fast-paced format with split screens and complex interweaving storylines of the original. The project will center on military hero Eric Carter (Hawkins) and chronicles his return to the U.S. and the trouble that follows him back – compelling him to ask CTU for help in saving his life, and stopping what potentially could be one of the largest-scale terror attacks on American soil. Coming from a very rough background, Carter turned his life around in the Army Rangers but now, back home in Virginia with his wife Nicole, he's pulled back into action as his past comes looking for him. Otto will play Rebecca Ingram, the blazing smart former head of CTU. Now married to Senator John Donovan, Rebecca is struggling with second thoughts about having left counterterrorism agency.

When Father Michael Spurlock (Corbett) arrived at the withering All Saints Church in Tennessee, he believed his job was too let folks down easy while the church gets sold. But when a group of Burmese immigrants show up on his doorstep, Michael quickly realizes how much All Saints matters to some folk. Going against the wishes of his superiors and all basic logic, Michael and the small community of All Saints transforms their church into a farm, hoping to save their church, and reinvigorate their faith in the process.

It's 1975, when the women's rights movement is still in its infancy. Gorgeous Bonnie Nolan (Silverstone) gave up her career as an actress in New York when she got pregnant and married Steve Nolan, now a wealthy real estate maven. The perfect Beverly Hills hostess, but also a strong role model for her two young daughters, Bonnie finds her life unraveling when she discovers that Steve is having an affair -- a deal breaker for their marriage, as far as she is concerned. But as she tries to establish an independent life in this man's world, Bonnie has even more unpleasant revelations in store.

A family comedy with a wide-eyed, ill-guided 18-year-old autistic male at the center. While Sam Watts (Gilchrist) is in some ways "normal" (he's verbal, he attends a regular public high school, and he just realized he might like to date girls) he still has a hard time reading non-verbal cues, so much of the world is a mystery to him (especially girls). Despite the fact that he doesn't have a mean bone in his body, Sam is blunt and straightforward. In fact, he doesn't know how not to be. Sam knows a lot about Antarctica and if you happen to sit next to him on the bus for more than five minutes, you probably will, too. Sam's disability earns him both scorn and intense loyalty from the people around him. For all the kids who taunt him at school, he has people at home and at work who defend and love him. Sam is very close to his family but as he approaches graduation he's starting to realize it's time to get ready to leave the nest. Sam narrates the series and brings us into his special, unique world.

Sky-high crime, officer-involved shootings, cover-ups and corruption: the over-extended and under-funded Chicago Police Department is spiraling out of control. Enter billionaire engineer Gideon Reeves (Kirk). After his best friend is murdered in a botched attempted robbery, and the killer remains at large, Gideon demands justice. Putting up millions of dollars of his own money, he makes an unprecedented deal to take over the troubled 13th District – and reboot it as a private police force: better, faster and smarter than anything seen before. With cutting-edge technology created by Gideon himself, this eccentric yet brilliant outsider challenges the city's police force to rethink everything about the way they fight crime. But the near-overnight transition to the city's most advanced police district doesn't sit well with all of its members. Gideon knows if he's going to change anything, he needs an ally, whom he finds in Officer Theresa Murphy (Martinez), an ambitious, street-smart cop who is ready to embrace Gideon's technological changes. With the help of Gideon's gifted tech officer, Ada Hamilton (Stasey), he and Murphy embark on a mission to turn the 13th District – including a skeptical Sgt. Ned Conrad (Hudson), and determined Officers Nicholas Brandt (Handley) and Tasha Goss (Boss) – into a dedicated crime-fighting force of the 21st century.

The story of two old friends who reconnect after 30 years apart and the women who complicate their lives. Old friends reconnect when a rumpled Huey (Koechner) appears at Bernard's New York apartment doorstep and invites himself to stay for what he says will be a couple of days. While flashbacks from their post-college days in the mid 80s suggest that Huey formerly had his pick of the ladies, he's now divorced and barely has a relationship with his 20-something daughter Zelda. Bernard is a preternatural nebbish, who used to get Huey's castoffs if he was lucky. But now he's a moderately successful book editor who does pretty well as a middle-aged swinging bachelor. The fun begins when Cassandra French, a movie studio lawyer, anesthetizes three of her would-be paramours, then locks them up in her basement. There she conducts "finishing school" courses to transform them into perfect gentlemen. All goes swimmingly until French is asked out by beefcake movie star Jason Kelly, only to discover he was using her to set up a lawsuit against her studio. French gets revenge by abducting Kelly, but the plot twists come fast and furious after he accidentally electrocutes himself, leaving her to dispose of the body. At the cheeky climax, French's gorgeous, air-headed yoga instructor friend takes the finishing school concept in a startling new direction. French's penchant for great one-liners is matched by Garcia's imaginative plotting and his dead-on satire of life in L.A., Hollywood and the movie industry.

Trying hard to eke out a living for herself and her mentally challenged twin brother, Desna Simms (Nash) runs a nail salon which launders money for a lucrative, barely legal prescription drug clinic down the block for her boss, Roller. When Roller's boss, Uncle Daddy, is so thrilled with their work that he gives Roller a mansion and Desna a crappy $3,000 bonus, Desna can see that it's time to stand up for herself--which is not something she has a problem doing.

Lauren Mauldin is a strong-willed and misguided woman who launches a blog after being cheated on one too many times. She encourages women to follow "The Pig Theory," and to break up with men precisely at six months in order to avoid heartache. Her plan works smoothly until her sister Gena introduces her to the charming Calvin Chesney, who refuses to be dumped. Instead, he challenges Lauren to a competition to prove her theory wrong, using his closest friends and challengers and Lauren's own friends as bait. With twists and turns and surprise challengers along the way, no one can predict how this will all turn out. And while no one can deny our sexual instincts are strong, we all continue to put our hearts on the line because in the end, we truly hope that love is stronger.

A family road trip is supposed to be a lot of fun . . . unless, of course, you're the Heffleys. The journey starts off full of promise, then quickly takes several wrong turns. Gas station bathrooms, crazed seagulls, a fender bender, and a runaway pig—not exactly Greg Heffley's idea of a good time. But even the worst road trip can turn into an adventure—and this is one the Heffleys won't soon forget. (September 6 - October 15)

Abby Hockstatter has been trying to help her Dad, Bob, hold the family together after her Mother's death a few years earlier. Although only 16, she has tried to become a kind of surrogate Mom to her one older and one younger brother. It is a lot of work for a teenager who is really not equipped for it. Every day as she gets into Bob's beat up Volvo station wagon to be driven to school she looks across the street to the perfect house and family of the Wellmans. After a freak accident which involves some suspicious tarot cards Abby wakes up as one of the Wellmans with a new Mother, Father and sister. Her life initially seems to have changed for the better, with her having a new athletic body and boyfriend, and now she is one of the popular girls at high school. The only problem is that when she comes home she still knows where she came from...across the street at the Hockstatters. Only now Bob and her brothers have taken a huge turn for the worse and the only one who recognizes Abby from her previous life is the Hockstatter dog, Dill.

Lee's Burger Block was started by William and Susan Lee 20 years ago, and is now run by their son, Jordan Lee. With its grease slicked floors, peeling paint, and 90s styled décor, it is clearly an establishment that has fallen from glory. They've managed to survive the competition from national and boutique burger chains because of their loyal but dwindling customers. However, the increasingly cutthroat landscape of the fast food industry forces them to make changes in order to stay relevant, and appeal to a larger and younger customer base. To do so, they devise various schemes to attract a famous food critic into their restaurant.

It tells the story of the legendary rivalry between two of the greatest movie stars of all time—Joan Crawford (Lange) and Bette Davis (Sarandon), and how they came together in 1962 to collaborate on a picture each hoped would revive their careers. The result, the critically acclaimed and box office smash What Ever Happened to Baby Jane? ultimately received five Academy Awards nominations and became a cult classic. But for its leads, Joan Crawford and Bette Davis, the real horror was working together. Molina will play the film's director Robert Aldrich, Tucci will portray studio titan Jack Warner, Davis will play gossip columnist Hedda Hopper and Burgess will be Crawford and Davis' co-star Victor Buono. The action crime caper, tells the true story of the biggest bank heist in U.S. history, which took place in 1972 in Laguna Beach, Calif. The film focuses on a gang of close-knit thieves from Youngstown, Ohio, who are tapped by the Teamsters to steal $30 million in illegal campaign contributions and blackmail money from President Nixon. The thieves went to the wrong bank, hitting a United California Bank instead of Nixon's home Bank of America branch in San Clemente and made off with an estimated $12 million. Seven of the eight conspirators were quickly caught but the getaway driver was able to flee and wasn't arrested until 1980.

Bartholomew Henry "Barry" Allen (Miller) is a police scientist who has a reputation for being very slow, deliberate, and frequently late, which frustrated his fiancée, Iris West. One night, as he was preparing to leave work, a lightning bolt shattered a case full of chemicals and spilled them all over Allen. As a result, Allen found that he could run extremely fast and had matching reflexes. He donned a set of red tights sporting a lightning bolt (reminiscent of the original), dubbed himself the Flash (after his childhood hero, Jay Garrick), and became a crimefighter active in Central City. In his civilian identity, he stores the costume compressed in a special ring via the use of a special gas that could compress cloth fibers to a very small fraction of their normal size.

An irreverent, sexual farce that evolves, against all odds, into a surprising love story. An edgy, tender romp about a trio of misfits that never grew up, living in the moment with no thought of the future or the past, bouncing from trouble to trouble and almost everything they do backfires. Yet despite that, they haphazardly, unwittingly do good things. They are perpetual outsiders, their faces pressed against the glass of a society that they will never really be a part of. When they make enemies with a gun-toting hairdresser it knocks the wind out of their joyride, and the journey becomes one of constant escape from the law, from society and from a hairdresser's revenge. Through their journey together, they manage to create, despite the odds stacked against them, a little family of their own. The action may be crude and robust, the language the stuff of pulp, but there is a tenderness underneath, a hopefulness, a yearning to have a life that is better than the one they were born into, yet still be able to hang loose and free. CAST: Joel McHale - Stephen Fry - Chris Williams - Shaun Brown - Christopher Mintz-Plasse - Christine Ko - Susannah Fielding

A longtime adventure reporter for the magazine, "The Great Outdoors," Joel is forced to take a desk job when he's sidelined by an injury. Relegated to the digital and social media department with a bunch of millennials, Joel finds that he's way out of touch with his entitled, super-sensitive, and painfully politically correct new colleagues, 20-somethings who know everything about social media -- but nothing about the actual outdoors. Worse, he'll be working with none other than Brooke, the love of his life, with whom things ended rockily some time back, and who is now clearly not happy to have him onboard... If Joel is to survive here and prove he's not already a relic, he'll have to find a way to adapt to this strange new digital world.

An original contemporary musical, about the American showman P.T. Barnum. Jackman will play the showman with a penchant for hoaxing a gullible public as he creates the three-ring circus that made him famous. The musical also focuses on his infatuation with singer Jenny Lind -- the so-called Swedish Nightingale. Efron will play Phillip, a handsome, rich young theatre producer who decides to become Barnum's junior partner/apprentice and eventually becomes Barnum's close friend and ringmaster. A love story set against the backdrop of one of the most politically explosive times in U.K. history. It tells the story of Jas (Pinto) and Marcus, whose relationship and values are tested when they form a radical underground cell. Their ultimate target becomes the Black Power Desk, a true-life, secretive counter-intelligence unit within Special Branch dedicated to crushing all forms of black activism. As a member of a newly-formed radical underground cell, Pinto's passionate and politically driven Jas helps liberate a charismatic convict from prison in an effort to lead the street fight against social injustice in 1971 London.

Bart Millard had his share of challenges growing up. His parents divorced when he was young and he suffered tremendous abuse at the hands of his father. Then life took an unexpected turn. After Bart's father was diagnosed with cancer, Bart was the only one around to care for him, and through that process the two began to mend their broken relationship, find common ground in renewed faith, eventually forming an unbreakable bond that lasted until the day of his father's death in 1991, when Bart was just 18. Believing that his father was now in heaven, Millard began writing the words "I can only imagine" on items when he was thinking about his father. Ten years later, in another unexpected twist, those words became the pivotal lyrics (and title) to a song that would be the debut hit for Bart's band, MercyMe, leading to major crossover success on both Christian and mainstream music charts, multiple awards, and eventually selling 8-million copies (and counting). Evans plays the lead role of Tom Jackman, a modern day descent of Jekyll who is beginning to exhibit the trademark split personality. The father and husband abandons his family, without explaining why, and lives in a fortified basement with a psychiatric nurse his ally. When they strap the doctor to a metal chair, she watches him transform into an alter ego who rages, shows heightened strength and speed, and can be a charming flirtatious scoundrel as well. The two personalities try to coexist, even though one doesn't remember what the other does while in control of the body. They use a micro cassette to leave messages for each other. Unable to stay away from the family he left behind for their own safety, he visits his wife, Hyde assumes control and learns about them, and things grow very complicated.

Inspired by the life of film mogul Irving Thalberg, on whom the protagonist Monroe Stahr is based. The project centers on Monroe Stahr (Bomer), Hollywood's first wunderkind studio executive in the 1930s as he climbs to the height of power pitting him against his mentor and current head of the studio, the brawny, imposing, charming and vain Pat Brady (Grammer), a character based on Louis B. Mayer. Having come from the streets, Brady has no intention of returning to his misfortune, and is determined to make sure his studio is successful, no matter what personal morals he compromises. Dewitt will play Pat Brady's wife, Rose Brady, who may be involved with Stahr. O'Brien will play the role of Max Miner, a displaced down-and-outer who's livid at his misfortune. Although homeless, Miner takes care of his younger siblings, 14-year-old Darla and 8-year-old Nathan, with whom he ekes out a precarious existence in the Hooverville next door to the Brady-American Studio. Cilenti will play Aubrey Hackett, a writer at Brady-American studios under Monroe. He's an intellect, a born protestor who wants to unionize the other Hollywood workers.

Legion introduces the story of David Haller (Stevens), based on the Marvel comics character Legion, the son of X-Men founder Charles Xavier. Since he was a teenager, David has struggled with mental illness. Diagnosed as schizophrenic, David has been in and out of psychiatric hospitals for years. A haunted man, David is getting tired of finding his way back to sanity and is about to give up when he meets the girl of his dreams, a fellow patient. After the strange encounter, he's confronted with the possibility that the voices he hears and the visions he sees might be real. Plaza will play David's friend Lenny, who despite a life of drugs and alcohol abuse, knows that any day now her life is gonna turn around, which gives her the likable energy of the impossible optimist despite her rough demeanor. Smart is Melanie, a nurturing, demanding therapist with a sharp mind and unconventional methods. Keller plays the self-sufficient and street smart Syd who uses her sharp and prickly demeanor to protect her soft core, because even though it makes her a sucker and puts her at risk, she still believes in happily ever after. (August 15 - November 2)

The Long Road Home will relive a heroic fight for survival during the Iraq War when the First Cavalry Division from Fort Hood, Texas, was ferociously ambushed on April 4, 2004, in Sadr City, Baghdad — a day that came to be known in military annals as "Black Sunday." The event series will cut between the soldiers on the ground and the homefront in Texas, where their wives and families await news for 48 hellish hours, expecting the worst. The incident, which took place 11 months after President George W. Bush's "Mission Accomplished" speech, changed the American military's view of Iraq from a peacekeeping mission to a fight against domestic insurgents. (Production will begin in early 2017.)

Set in rural Montana in the early 1990s, Cameron Post feels a mix of guilt and relief when her parents die in a car accident. Their deaths mean they will never learn the truth she eventually comes to—that she's gay. Orphaned, Cameron comes to live with her old-fashioned grandmother and ultraconservative aunt Ruth. There she falls in love with her best friend, a beautiful cowgirl. When she's eventually outed, her aunt sends her to God's Promise, a religious conversion camp that is supposed to "cure" her homosexuality. At the camp, Cameron comes face to face with the cost of denying her true identity.

In Monsters of God, savagery and violence are the cornerstones of Colonel "Terrible" Bill Lancaster's holy war against the Comanche in post-Civil War Texas. Despite the peaceful co-existence between the Comanche and local townspeople, Lancaster sets out on a quest to kill off every single member of the tribe, bringing chaos to the town of Slater. Meanwhile, his wife, Cynthia Lancaster, will let no one get in the way of her obsessive quest to institute her feminist ideals, even if she has to challenge the United States Army and make her own allegiance with the Comanche women. Whether by force or free will, change is coming to Texas, and the escalating insanity will reveal humanity at its most monstrous.

Henri Charriere, called Papillon for the butterfly tattoo on his chest, was convicted in Paris in 1931 of a murder he did not commit. Sentenced to life imprisonment in the penal colony of French Guiana, he became obsessed with one goal: escape. After planning and executing a series of treacherous yet failed attempts over many years, he was eventually sent to the notorious prison Devil's Island, a place from which no one had ever escaped--until Papillon. His flight to freedom remains one of the most incredible feats of human cunning, will and endurance ever undertaken.

An unstoppable plague is sweeping the nation...Our insatiable appetite for cheap consumer goods has pushed many species to the brink of extinction. Species that were geographically contained, until now. 16-year-old Alison Knight could never know that the burger she was about to eat would be the catalyst for an outbreak humankind is powerless to stop. The spiders, which entered the food chain through contaminated meat, infiltrated grazing cattle herds at lightning speed. It was only a matter of time before someone became infected. In warm, moist, safe flesh the eggs hatch. Millions of innocent people are walking incubators providing the ideal breeding ground for a terrifying arachnid invasion.

The politically-charged project centers around a group of journalists who asked the tough questions about Saddam Hussein's alleged WMD's (weapons of mass destruction) which was the way the Bush administration sold the Iraq War to the American public and around the world in 2003. The story follows Knight-Ridder reporters Jonathan Landay and Warren Strobel, who after the events of 9/11, meet with their bureau chief John Walcott to get to the bottom of who was responsible. They find their sources telling them the Bush Administration is trying to tie Saddam Hussein to the terror attacks, even though there is no evidence to support the claim. As the push for war in Iraq increases, they bring in legendary reporter Joe Galloway to give them the high-level sources to help counter the false narrative of Hussein, al-Qaeda and WMDs. They find themselves one of the only media sources running stories countering the prevailing narrative. In the end, Iraq is invaded and their reporting is proven true. While more iconic papers follow the administration line, the smaller-market Knight-Ridder papers try to get beneath the surface and serve the smaller markets where the military bases are, with the reporters believing the military troops in their markets were going to be the most affected by the decision to go to war. It is those troops whose lives would be risked and lost on the battlefield.

The family drama focuses on a contemporary multi-racial family: a philosophy professor, his lawyer wife, their three adopted children from Somalia, Vietnam and Colombia, and their sole biological child. This seemingly perfect, progressive family is in actuality harboring deep rifts. Then, one of the children begins to see things others cannot. Is it mental illness? Or something else? The series is a tragicomic meditation on the complicated forces at work on us all in America today.

An edge-of-your-seat thriller with shocking twists and turns wrapped around a medical franchise. When a Beverly Hills doctor, driving home from work late one night inadvertently hits and kills a pedestrian and decides to flee the scene, his life changes forever. The victim's wife finds the doctor's wallet at the scene, but instead of turning him into the police, she decides to blackmail him. The stakes are raised further when the doctor's wife becomes the lead police investigator for the hit and run case. Thus begins a gripping and suspenseful story filled with secrets, lies, extortion and ultimately redemption.

The project is based on the true story of Catherine Weldon, a widowed Brooklyn artist who, in June 1889, traveled to the Standing Rock Reservation in Dakota Territory to help Sitting Bull hold onto land that the government was trying to wrest from his people. Sitting Bull was the legendary Native American leader who led his people to defeat General Custer at the Battle of Little Bighorn. Since the Sioux chieftain could neither read nor write English, he initially welcomes Weldon's offer of help. Her efforts, however, backfire, as she is ordered to leave the reservation, and the Standing Rock Sioux were bullied into signing away their land. But she returned with her teen-age son, settling at Sitting Bull's camp on the Grand River. In recognition of her unusual qualities, Sitting Bull's people called her 'Toka heya mani win', or 'Woman Walking Ahead.' The mainstream press vilified Weldon, labelling her 'Sitting Bull's white squaw' and accusing her of inciting Sitting Bull to join the Ghost Dance religion then sweeping the West, which frightened law enforcement officials. Even though Weldon actually opposed the Ghost Dance movement, arguing the army would use it as an excuse to jail or kill Sitting Bull. Ultimately, the confrontation over the Ghost Dance movement would lead to the killing of Sitting Bull and the Wounded Knee massacre.

It follows Henry Mueller (Linklater), a charismatic high school English teacher who has a breakdown and is committed to a mental institution. There, under the watchful eye of Louise Baldwin (Sykes), he begins to feel "sane." Henry starts to question the system and the methods used to contain the inmates, ultimately becoming the leader of an inmate revolt. It's a dark comedy about an asylum that operates like a family, and as in all families, the question of who is sane and who is not is open for discussion.
