The project will center on military hero Eric Carter (Hawkins) and chronicles his return to the U.S. and the trouble that follows him back – compelling him to ask CTU for help in saving his life, and stopping what potentially could be one of the largest-scale terror attacks on American soil. A family comedy with a wide-eyed, ill-guided 18-year-old autistic male at the center. While Sam Watts (Gilchrist) is in some ways "normal" (he's verbal, he attends a regular public high school, and he just realized he might like to date girls) he still has a hard time reading non-verbal cues, so much of the world is a mystery to him (especially girls). Despite the fact that he doesn't have a mean bone in his body, Sam is blunt and straightforward. In fact, he doesn't know how not to be. Sam knows a lot about Antarctica and if you happen to sit next to him on the bus for more than five minutes, you probably will, too. Sam's disability earns him both scorn and intense loyalty from the people around him. For all the kids who taunt him at school, he has people at home and at work who defend and love him. Sam is very close to his family but as he approaches graduation he's starting to realize it's time to get ready to leave the nest. Sam narrates the series and brings us into his special, unique world.

Set among a diverse group of students of color as they navigate a predominantly white Ivy League college where racial tensions are often swept under the rug, Dear White People is a send up of "post-racial" America that also weaves a universal story about forging one's own unique path. Bell's Troy Fairbanks is the charming son of the dean of students, a political science major campaigning to become Winchester University's first black student president. Troy strives for ideals rather than his own dreams, even as it becomes harder to keep his personal and private lives separate. Browning will play Samantha White, a biracial film major at an Ivy League school whose radio show 'Dear White People' lands her a spot in a campus political movement. Several black student groups want her as their spokesperson, but Sam is still learning to speak for herself. (September 1 - November 11)

Israel awakes one morning to find itself plunged into an enthralling espionage affair that threatens to become an unprecedented international crisis. Breaking news alerts around the world broadcast video footage depicting the Iranian Minister of Defense being kidnapped from his hotel room during a secret visit to Moscow. The identities and photographs of the five kidnapers are made public. They are all Israeli citizens with dual nationalities. The governments of Russia and Iran point the finger at Israel's Mossad. The methods, the audacity and the high-profile target leave no room for doubt. The five Israelis—all ordinary, undistinguished people, awash in their daily routines—are stunned to find themselves implicated in the daring kidnapping. Their attempts at denial, followed by anger, laughter and indifference, are all in vain. The publicity turns their lives upside down and sweeps them up a wave of public attention. At first these so-called heroes believe the affair will fade away. But they soon discover, to their astonishment, that official Israel, the state that is supposed to protect them, as well as Mossad itself, are denying all involvement and view them as suspects. Instead of helping them, the authorities persecute, investigate, and point fingers. Even among their loved ones, doubt starts to nag. Could they have been involved?

It tells the story of the legendary rivalry between two of the greatest movie stars of all time—Joan Crawford (Lange) and Bette Davis (Sarandon), and how they came together in 1962 to collaborate on a picture each hoped would revive their careers. The result, the critically acclaimed and box office smash What Ever Happened to Baby Jane? ultimately received five Academy Awards nominations and became a cult classic. The 2-hour clip featured a screen-capture of an unknown viewer scrolling through the video posts of popular vlogger "ImpoliteMike," specifically the final episodes that led to his widely talked-about disappearance. The video ignited a flurry of heated discussions between skeptics and conspiracy theorists who debated whether the video was someone's idea of a bad joke, or the possibility that the missing vlogger's killer(s) may have uploaded the post with malicious intent. Whatever the case, this series of vlogs will send icy shivers down your spine.

High School Lover is the tragedy of a young woman entangled in the sadistic grasp of an older man. Seventeen-year-old Kelley Winters is a typical high school girl with typical high school girl problems: all she wants is to survive high school so she can go to college. When Kelley and her best friends Allison and Larry decide to go to Timothy West show, she meets Christian Booth. He's handsome, charming, famous, and definitely older than her. It's love at first sight. It's also illegal. The pair's whirlwind romance begins with private late night limo rides, VIP partying around New York City with Christian's posse, and some seriously steamy makeouts. But as the relationship progresses, so does Christian's erratic and possessive behavior. He even goes so far as to threaten Kelley's father if he doesn't let him date her. Along for the ride, Kelley is dizzied by Christian's fame and charm, and realizes too late that he's unstable-dangerous, even. To be safe, Kelley decides to end things with the movie star. In Monsters of God, savagery and violence are the cornerstones of Colonel "Terrible" Bill Lancaster's holy war against the Comanche in post-Civil War Texas. Despite the peaceful co-existence between the Comanche and local townspeople, Lancaster sets out on a quest to kill off every single member of the tribe, bringing chaos to the town of Slater. Meanwhile, his wife, Cynthia Lancaster, will let no one get in the way of her obsessive quest to institute her feminist ideals, even if she has to challenge the United States Army and make her own allegiance with the Comanche women. Whether by force or free will, change is coming to Texas, and the escalating insanity will reveal humanity at its most monstrous.

Evie Callahan leads a rather regimented, stale, unromantic life; her romance with Timothy is sputtering out from lack of interest on her part. When she meets Xavier, he brings a jolt of something new into her life: a fun, rollicking romance. There's just one thing wrong with Xavier; he's crazy as a loon, and thinks that life as we know it has eight months to go until a runaway asteroid smacks us all into stardust. Yes, Xavier is just plain crazy. You hope. (August 23 - December 21)

Ronald Reagan's story is told through the unique voice of Viktor, a KGB agent (a composite character based on real events) who closely followed Reagan since his days in Hollywood. The film begins with an aging Viktor, now 90 years old, being visited by a young Russian leader who wants to know how the Soviet Union was lost. Viktor, the spy who knows everything there is to know about Reagan, recounts the tale of his great adversary: the man the KGB nicknamed "The Crusader," beginning in 1922 when 11-year old Ronald Reagan goes through his first life crisis. From the classroom to the Oval Office, we will grow with the man until the day he is shot. We will then witness his renewed faith, and see it in action as he plants the seeds that will bring an Evil Empire to its knees and allow him to triumph over tyranny without firing a single shot.

The politically-charged project centers around a group of journalists who asked the tough questions about Saddam Hussein's alleged WMD's (weapons of mass destruction) which was the way the Bush administration sold the Iraq War to the American public and around the world in 2003. The story follows Knight-Ridder reporters Jonathan Landay and Warren Strobel, who after the events of 9/11, meet with their bureau chief John Walcott to get to the bottom of who was responsible. They find their sources telling them the Bush Administration is trying to tie Saddam Hussein to the terror attacks, even though there is no evidence to support the claim. As the push for war in Iraq increases, they bring in legendary reporter Joe Galloway to give them the high-level sources to help counter the false narrative of Hussein, al-Qaeda and WMDs. They find themselves one of the only media sources running stories countering the prevailing narrative. In the end, Iraq is invaded and their reporting is proven true. While more iconic papers follow the administration line, the smaller-market Knight-Ridder papers try to get beneath the surface and serve the smaller markets where the military bases are, with the reporters believing the military troops in their markets were going to be the most affected by the decision to go to war. It is those troops whose lives would be risked and lost on the battlefield.

The story of two children trying to understand life after death. When their grandfather dies, it's their first encounter with death. They suddenly find themselves pondering the afterlife, and how they should be conducting themselves on earth to be sure they get to the right place when they die. They hear the story of Saint Henry, who preached the idea that it is Hell where man should strive to end up, not Heaven. It is Hell where man will be happier, more fulfilled. And that Heaven is in reality a wasteland; a dull, gray, quiet place where the spirit is numbed for eternity. It is the story of two children who, out of love, get their parents to commit suicide with them.

When an international border dispute arises with Canada, the Super Troopers are called into duty to patrol the border between Vermont and the Great White North. Back on the job, they find themselves at odds with their Canadian counterparts, The Royal Canadian Mounted Police, a confrontation that quickly escalates from pranks to pullovers to all out brawls. As our Troopers navigate the Mountie conflict, they unearth a crime of international proportions: a smuggling ring moving arms, pharmaceuticals and other illegal items across the border. Their skills are put to the test when the Canadian rivalry, the criminal investigation, an illicit Canuck-American romance, and their self-implosion mascot, Farva, all collide in an attempt to bring them down.

The project is based on the true story of Catherine Weldon, a widowed Brooklyn artist who, in June 1889, traveled to the Standing Rock Reservation in Dakota Territory to help Sitting Bull hold onto land that the government was trying to wrest from his people. Sitting Bull was the legendary Native American leader who led his people to defeat General Custer at the Battle of Little Bighorn. Since the Sioux chieftain could neither read nor write English, he initially welcomes Weldon's offer of help. Her efforts, however, backfire, as she is ordered to leave the reservation, and the Standing Rock Sioux were bullied into signing away their land. But she returned with her teen-age son, settling at Sitting Bull's camp on the Grand River. In recognition of her unusual qualities, Sitting Bull's people called her 'Toka heya mani win', or 'Woman Walking Ahead.' The mainstream press vilified Weldon, labelling her 'Sitting Bull's white squaw' and accusing her of inciting Sitting Bull to join the Ghost Dance religion then sweeping the West, which frightened law enforcement officials. Even though Weldon actually opposed the Ghost Dance movement, arguing the army would use it as an excuse to jail or kill Sitting Bull. Ultimately, the confrontation over the Ghost Dance movement would lead to the killing of Sitting Bull and the Wounded Knee massacre. (September 7 - October 21)

In 1941 marksmen from the Royal Ulster Constabulary, following a Directive from The Ministry of Public Security, shot dead 23 animals at Belfast Zoo. They destroyed one hyena, six wolves, one puma, one tiger, one black bear, one Barbary lion, two polar bears, one lynx and giant rat named Hugo. During these turbulent times, a woman secretly walked a young elephant from the zoo each evening to the backyard of her terraced home. There, she cared for and comforted it as the Luftwaffe bombs rained down over Belfast. This is a true story... and our setting for Zoo. Seen through the eyes of 10 year old Tom, aided and abetted by his misfit friends, this moving adventure unfolds as Tom takes on the fight to save Buster the elephant.
