In the wake of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, Malin, a Russian literature professor at The University of Havana, is separated from his family and job when he's sent to work as a translator between Cuban doctors and children sent from the USSR to receive medical treatment for radiation poisoning. Torn from the abstract world of academia and forced into the relentlessly real world of medicine, Malin must find ways to cope in order to stop his growing depression. When he meets a child who tells him a story, Malin connects with the kids and finds his way through. Just as he begins to adapt to his new job and understand its importance, the Berlin Wall falls and Cuba enters the deepest economic crisis the island has ever known. But Malin is now so entrenched in the lives of the Chernobyl Children that he doesn't notice his young family is suffering. He must find his way back to his wife and young kids through the lessons he learns from the children in the hospital – and become a better person on the way. (January 16 - February 17)

Arnold Spirit, a goofy-looking dork with a decent jumpshot, spends his time lamenting life on the "poor-ass" Spokane Indian reservation, drawing cartoons (which accompany, and often provide more insight than, the narrative), and, along with his aptly named pal Rowdy, laughing those laughs over anything and nothing that affix best friends so intricately together. When a teacher pleads with Arnold to want more, to escape the hopelessness of the rez, Arnold switches to a rich white school and immediately becomes as much an outcast in his own community as he is a curiosity in his new one. He weathers the typical teenage indignations and triumphs like a champ but soon faces far more trying ordeals as his home life begins to crumble and decay amidst the suffocating mire of alcoholism on the reservation.

Schumer will play a character who lives in Barbieland, among all of the various Barbie characters beloved by doll collectors. In a fish out of water story Schumer's Barbie gets kicked out, basically because she's not perfect enough, is a bit eccentric and doesn't quite fit the mold. She then goes on an adventure in the real world and by the time she returns to Barbieland to save it, she has gained the realization that perfection comes on the inside, not the outside, and that the key to happiness is belief in one self, free of the obligation to adhere to some unattainable standard of perfection. The South Side of a certain Midwestern megalopolis is nicknamed "Chiraq," because geographically it's in Chicago, but the violence level is straight out of Baghdad. The show follows a half dozen interrelated lives, all linked by two things: the same skin color and the same omnipresent threat of deadly violence. Henderson plays Kevin, an adolescent whose childlike innocence collides with his pent up aggression. Kevin has seen more in his twelve years than most people have seen in their whole lives. McClain is 18-year-old Jerricka, a tightly wound restaurant manager. She and her boyfriend, Brandon, are trying to pull themselves up in the world, but the Southside does not easily let them go. Dawson will play the mother of two of the main characters Brandon and Coogie. A hard-drinker, she's a woman that has never received a lot of love from her parents so when she has her own children she has very little to give. Weaver is Ronnie, a street corner philosopher and a fixture in the neighborhood, who must go to extraordinary lengths to try and win back the love of his life.

The atmospheric mystery-thriller opens as Detroit neurosurgeon Polly Lewis embarks on an unorthodox study in the field of memory and trauma. Her once closest friend - the irreverent, brilliant Tash Hollander - comes home after living many years in a strange, off-the-grid community in Belize. Upon her return, Tash insinuates herself into Polly's life in audacious ways that threaten everything Polly has achieved. But why? The Deep Mad Dark is a propulsive, layered mystery about an intoxicating friendship and how it leads to a brutal act of violence that drives two women in radically different ways. Set against the landscape of modern Detroit, it explores the power certain friendships have to shape who we are - in ways both beautiful and dangerous.

Amongst a crew of thieves, Donnie Alison pulls off the heist of a Brinks armored truck. This baffles Nick Flanagan, leader of the unconventional Los Angeles Sheriff's Department Metro Robbery-Homicide Division, because there was no money in the truck. Nick's group is made up of a ragtag group of misfits and heavies who are known as his Regulators. Nick and his team launch an investigation, and find Donnie to be the weakest point. Nick approaches him at The Hofbrau where Donnie bartends. He later kidnaps him and takes him back to a shady motel for interrogation. After Donnie urinates in his pants he is coerced into telling them how he met the crew's leader known as Merrimen. Donnie reveals in flashback that Merrimen had just been released from prison and was looking for a big score. In the flashback, Donnie is approached by one of his crew and asked if he would like to contribute his services as a getaway driver. Donnie assures them he hasn't done anything, and Nick lets him leave. Merrimen, Donnie, and the rest of the crew case the Los Angeles Federal Reserve. Merrimen informs them that all of the money from various businesses ends up here, where millions of it is discarded and shredded for being unfit currency. His plan is to break in and steal the unfit cash before it is shredded. While the crew goes over the details of the heist, Nick Flanagan and his Regulators investigate the Brinks robbery and attempt to figure out what their next target is going to be. Meanwhile, Donnie meets a beautiful wealthy girl by the name of Valeria and builds up the nerve to ask her out. They go out on a date, and while it appears to be going well, he lies to her about the luxury car he rented specifically for the evening because he was afraid she wouldn't like him otherwise. She finds out and forces him to take her home immediately. Donnie and the crew have dinner at Benihana. Nick walks in and pretends to know him from the gym. Afterward, Merrimen is suspicious and drives to a mortuary where he forces Donnie to strip down so he can check and see if he is wearing a wire. Donnie confesses that Nick is a cop but didn't tell him anything. Nick finds out about the Federal Reserve job while Merrimen continues to plan his heist. Later, while bartending, Valeria approaches Donnie and confesses that she likes him regardless of his financial situation.

TEotFW follows James and Alyssa, two teenagers living a seemingly typical teen experience as they face the fear of coming adulthood. It tells their story through each character's perspective, jumping between points of view with each chapter. But quickly, this somewhat familiar teenage experience takes a more nihilistic turn as James's character exhibits a rapidly forming sociopathy that threatens both of their futures. He harbors violent fantasies and begins to act on them, while Alyssa remains as willfully ignorant for as long as she can, blinded by young love. The story highlights the disdain, fear and existential search that many teenagers fear, but through a road trip drama that owes as much to Badlands as The Catcher in the Rye.

In the reboot, one in every seventy five human begins is now either a refugee, internally displaced, or seeking asylum. New York is breathtakingly lovely. Manhattan is the island we know, but with more towering glass structures and a high, undulating glass wall. The sky is alive with drones as serene as bees, and artificial intelligence controls all in the form of an ethnically ambiguous, cheery young woman called April. A small staff of technicians and researchers known as "Seers" monitor all. Colonel Robert "Snake" Plissken has only eleven hours to complete his mission to recover a mysterious device called Fat Boy — an ominous, dull metal sphere about the size of a car, in a nest of conduits and cabling, from intensely charismatic Thomas Newton, the playboy heir to an agrochemical and biotech corporation.

The electrifying true story of Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald, the handsome, Princeton-educated physician convicted of savagely slaying his young pregnant wife and two small children, murders he vehemently denies committing. The project chronicles this horrifying and intricate crime, and probes the life and psyche of the magnetic, all-American Jeffrey MacDonald, a golden boy who seemed destined to have it all. The result is a penetration to the heart of darkness that enshrouded one of the most complex criminal cases ever to capture the attention of the American public. It is a haunting, stunningly suspenseful work that no reader will be able to forget.

A silent-film star. A woman who played children, wide-eyed and gamine, skipping about in frills and long curls. That's how most people remember Mary Pickford. In reality, Pickford was a towering figure in movie history, central to the evolution of film acting and the development of the Hollywood motion picture industry. Born in Toronto in 1892, Pickford began acting as a child. She switched from stage to film at seventeen, joining D.W. Griffith's Biograph Company, and became almost unimaginably popular. This allowed her to dictate the terms of her contracts -- power she seized and consolidated. She developed her own production company at Adolph Zukor's Famous Players, and in 1919 she co-founded United Artists (along with Griffith, Charlie Chaplin, and her husband, Douglas Fairbanks), taking not only creative control but also direction of the marketing and distribution of her films. Eight years in the making, this definitive biography brings Pickford to life as a complex knot of contradictions and establishes her as a groundbreaking genius, casting new light on one of the most influential and least understood artists in the history of popular culture. Eileen Whitfield recreates Pickford's life in meticulously researched detail, from her trying days in turn-of-the-century Toronto through her reign as mistress of Pickfair, the legendary Beverly Hills estate at which she and Fairbanks entertained the world's elite, to her sadly moving demise. Along the way, Whitfield explores the intricate psychology that tied Pickford to her mother throughout her life and analyzes Pickford's brilliant innovations in the art of film acting, her profound influence on the movie business, and her role in the history of fame: once the best known woman in the world, she was the object of a mass adoration that prefigured today's cult of celebrity. Debt Collector and sometime-killer Roy (Foster) senses that his boss, a dangerous, violent and pitiless loan-shark, wants him dead, and his next routine assignment is indeed a death-trap. Yet what the would-be killers do to Roy is not the same as what he does to them...after a smoking spasm of violence, they are mostly dead and he is just about alive. Before making his getaway, Roy discovers young prostitute Rocky (Fanning) hiding in the back room, and he sees something in her frightened, defiant eyes that prompts a fateful decision. He takes her with him as he flees New Orleans to Galveston—an action as ill-advised as it is inescapable. Rocky is too young, too tough, too sexy – and far too much trouble, especially when she makes a detour to liberate her 3 year old sister from the clutches of their seedy step-father. Like the smoke dancing upwards from a barrel of a gun, there's no way things are going to end well. This fragile trio hides in the battered seascape of Galveston's country-western bars and fleabag motels, a world of treacherous drifters, rusting pickup trucks, and worn-out dreams. Any chance of a safe haven is soon lost. Rocky is a girl with secrets to hide, one that will pursue and damage Roy for a very long time to come in this powerful and atmospheric film noir.

Despite the fact that Archie and Sonny do all sorts of dirty jobs for their Mafia boss Don Blatto, he still plans to arrange for their immediate destruction. A hair's breadth away from death, the two buddies not only escape their demise, but also become fabulously wealthy. Blatto's children, both child prodigies, learn, through subliminal messages gleaned from TV programs, that an asteroid is heading toward the earth. Because of this, the richest people throughout this surreal America are secreting away all of their wealth in the underground vault of Big Museum. The FBI designs operation "Garlic and Gunpowder", during which the Italian Mafia and the Chinese Triad will annihilate each other in their attempt to take control of the wealth. Archie and Sonny manage to steal an entire van full of cash and they take off for the Tuscany-like countryside to open a winery... and emerge from the despicable Mafia intrigue smelling like roses.

This is the story a woman, Millie (Berry) and her 7 foster children, who live in South Central during the Los Angeles riots of 1993. Millie's huge heart and addiction to rescuing children, leads her to take in more children than she can handle. The story revolves around her family and the experiences they encounter preceding, and immediately after the Rodney King verdict is read. As the riots erupt, all of Millie's kids get caught up in one way or another. With the help of her neighbor, Obie (Craig) who is a loner and eccentric outcast, the two venture out into the madness in search of her children. In the process, the unlikely couple find solace in each other as well as romance. In the dystopian world of the LA riots, Kings examines all that was true to South Central Los Angeles; the people who lived there, those caught in the crossfire, and police who tried to control without understanding and empathy. A brilliant computer programmer, desperate to save his terminally ill daughter, creates the first-ever piece of self-aware artificial intelligence. But things go terribly wrong when the technology, designed to help injured soldiers, is hijacked by the government and used to create the ultimate robotic weapon. In the near future, a digital cold war has begun and powerful nations race to design super-thinking artificial intelligence. A new strain of polio has also spread around the world and is infecting millions of children. In Iran, engineers have developed a supercomputer that designed spider-like robots that can control humans. One of the engineers, Suri, is a spy. In England, brilliant computer programmer and inventor of the quantum computer, Vincent McCarthy, is brokenhearted by his daughter's severe autism that keeps her in a hospital in a near vegetative state. Vincent works tirelessly at a secret military base designing new artificial limbs and an artificial brain that he hopes one day might cure his daughter. He performs his experiments on severely wounded military veterans who are in prison. One of his patients, James, is quadriplegic and is waiting on new limbs. Another, Ray, is missing half his brain and Vincent is trying to use his artificial brain to help Ray restore his mind but it's not working and Vincent thinks software is to blame. (February 4 - 25)

Ted Kaczynski (Bettany), also known as the "Unabomber," terrified the nation over the span of 20 years from the 1980s through the early 1990s. Manifesto will tell the story of how the FBI brought down one of the most infamous criminal masterminds in the world from the point of view of an FBI profiler. The series will trace how FBI Agent Jim "Fitz" Fitzgerald (Worthington) challenged the "old school" ways with his radical new approach to intelligence gathering. Prior to Fitzgerald's involvement, the profile of the perpetrator took a completely different direction. Fitzgerald had training as a profiler, but it was his focus on linguistics that became vital to breaking the case. He believed that the key to unlocking the true identity of the Unabomber would be found in the language of The Manifesto, a detailed account of some of Kaczynski's plots.

Becky, Adam and their 5-year-old daughter Acie are a perfect family until a tragic accident during a 4th of July celebration kills Adam. Struggling with the grieving process, Becky decides she needs to step away from the family farm and all its reminders of the life she once had. She leaves Acie with her grandfather Ben and visits with her old friend from school, June. With all the best intentions, June offers Becky plenty of distraction from her shattered family life. Fueled by her anger at God and loss of faith, Becky starts drinking heavily and making other self-destructive choices. Then, after Becky is arrested for public intoxication and disorderly conduct, Ben threatens to keep Acie until Becky sets herself right. A chance encounter in a bus station with a guitar-toting traveler gives Becky the inspiration she needs to reignite her faith and reunite her family.

The story revolves around the library inhabitants, many of whom are homeless and mentally ill who seek shelter and warmth inside its walls during two of the coldest days in the city in recent memory. With an exhausted and overwhelmed staff at odds with library administration over how to handle the crisis, a conscientious librarian turns the building into a homeless shelter for the night by staging an "Occupy" type sit in. What begins as an act of civil disobedience becomes a stand-off with police and library officials. Sides are drawn and the big questions are asked about how to care of our fellow citizens who are unable to care for themselves.

In Jersey City, narcotics officer Pete Jablonski is in a hurry to meet his wife at the hospital to get an ultrasound after getting stuck working all night. Suddenly he hits a young black teen riding a bike, and the teen looks dead. Pete's superior, Mike Diangelo, and his crew of narcotics officers are there almost instantly and tell Pete to leave and that they'll handle it. Pete is in shock but goes to meet his wife Marie. Elsewhere we meet KJ, an African-American alcoholic prosecutor who no longer believes in the system. She was having an affair with her boss, State Prosecutor James Connelly, but he broke it off so he could run for governor. Meanwhile the teen's body is found at the park. Pete feels guilty and returns to the park where he hit the boy, where police led by Detective Fish are investigating. It turns out the boy is still alive. Next we meet Latrice and Isaiah Butler, who happen to be the black teen's parents and nice churchgoing people. They return home and find their son Brenton isn't there and listen to a voice mail from the police and rush to the hospital.

The sibling rivalry story behind iconic sports brands Adidas and Puma. Set against the backdrop of the rise of Nazi Germany — and through the 1936 Berlin Olympics and World War II — the film depicts the true story of the Dassler brothers, Adolf and Rudolf, and the family divide that resulted in the emergence of two of the strongest sports brands in history. Lore has it the pair started a small shoemaking business in Bavaria, focusing primarily on hand-sewn athletic footwear. But as their business took off, the brothers grew increasingly frustrated with each other and in the mid-1940s Rudolf set up a rival shop, while Adi remained in the initial plant and rebranded the company Adidas. In 1948, Rudolf registered his new company, Puma. (Production is scheduled to begin in 2017.)

Dell (Hart) is a middle aged black man struggling to pay his rent in New York City. He has a chance meeting with a quadriplegic man named Phillip (Cranston) and his assistant, Yvonne. Phillip takes a liking to him, and insists that Yvonne call him to interview for a job as his new driver and primary caregiver. Yvonne is shocked, but does as she is told. Dell shows up for the interview with a very poor resume, and is clearly the least qualified of all candidates, but manages to land the job after being selected by Phillip based on gut instinct. Phillip lives in a Park Avenue penthouse, his fabulous wealth a far cry from Dell's underprivileged background. Dell gleefully moves in with Phillip, especially enamored with his garage full of luxury cars. Phillip and Dell quickly develop a powerful friendship. Dell brings a missing element of fun and free spirit into Phillip's life, and Phillip introduces Dell to high art such as painting and the opera. After initial resistance, Dell embraces these arts, and begins painting on his own. He finds out that Phillip has been exchanging love letters with a mysterious woman named Lily, who he has never met in person. Dell forces Phillip to call her and leave a voicemail, but she does not respond. Dell begins to notice that Yvonne might have an attraction to Phillip. (January 16 - March 17)

Julie (Rothe) is popular and charming, but unlike her friends who are happy hanging out at the Galleria everyday, Julie is looking for something more. She's creative and fashion-forward, finding a way to make the 80s Valley Girl style her own. Her charisma and good looks landed her the hottest dude in school, who is unfortunately kind of a jerk. Everyone assumes they'll get married since they've been dating for most of high school. She's trapped in her wealthy, suburban Valley bubble. She feels increasingly claustrophobic in this world until she meets hot weirdo punk rocker Randy. He introduces her to his punk lifestyle and she falls hard. She is in love for the first time and her family and friends don't approve. She must stand up for herself, find her voice, and challenge what it means to be a Valley Girl.

When you know your world is predetermined, it's hard to care about your choices. This is true for James Odin. On a rain-soaked night in 1991, two cars collide, leaving all drivers dead on the scene, including the mother of the lone survivor — a child — James Odin. It's a tragedy. But what's more tragic is that seven-year-old James foresaw the accident happening two days prior. He tried to prevent it, but who's going to believe a kid who claims to see the future? Twenty-plus years later, James is a product of the failed foster care system. Knowing that the events of his future are predestined, he's getting by, using his ability for petty crime and cheap thrills. But when a pre-sentient vision reveals to him his own imminent murder, James must go on the run and change the fate he knows is fixed.
